Francis Keppel To Give Commencement Address

The United States Comissioner of Education, Francis Keppel, will be the guest speaker at the Commencement Day Exercises Monday.

After graduation from Harvard as a Phi Beta Kappa, Keppel served as secretary of the Joint Army and Navy Commission on Welfare and Education during the second World War.

After the war, he became assistant dean at his alma mater, Harvard. He was promoted to assistant to the Provost and, finally, to Dean of the Faculty of Education, a position he held until his appointment as United States Commissioner of Education.

Keppel is also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION: Francis Keppel will be the keynote speaker in Monday's ceremony.

Record Number of Seniors To Receive Degrees Mon.

A record 305 senior men and women, will graduate from Middlebury Monday morning. The commencement exercises will mark the end of the college's 164th academic year and will highlight a four-day program of activities for both graduates and alumni-ae.

Dr. James I. Armstrong, presiding at his first commencement since becoming president of Middlebury last September, will also award six advanced degrees and confer honorary degrees upon five others.

In addition to degrees, 45 senior men will be commissioned 2nd Lts. under the Army's ROTC program. Three others will be commissioned officers in the Marine Corps under a special program.

In contrast to former years, traditional Class Day ceremonies will not be held this year. Various departmental and academic honors usually announced at that time will be presented at baccalaureate Sunday morning instead.

However, the annual commencement luncheon will take place at 12:15 p. m. Saturday in the Memorial Field House. Fenwick N. Buffum, '33, president of the Washington, D. C. District of the Middlebury College Alumni Association, will be master of ceremonies for John Kirk, national president, who is unable to attend. President Armstrong will welcome the ten returning classes this year.

Seniors, parents, and alumni are invited to the dinner where Dr. Armstrong will honor distinguished alumni. An informal reception at the President's home will follow the luncheon at 3:30 p. m.

Graduation itself is composed of two ceremonies, Sunday's Baccalaureate Service and Monday's Commencement Day exercises.

The traditional morning Baccalaureate Service conducted by Chaplain Scott, for seniors and parents, will be in Mead Memorial Chapel at 10:45.

'THE FANTASTICKS': Tom Bullard and Cathy Scimeca in a scene from the musical production which captivated Middlebury undergraduates three weeks ago.

'Fantasticks' Production Scheduled For Weekend

The Fantasticks, Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt's off-Broadway musical about the romantic and realistic aspects of love, will be presented twice during commencement weekend, Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 p. m. in Wright Memorial Theatre.

The two-act play tells the story of a boy and a girl who fall in love, thinking that their fathers are against their relationship. They meet secretly by "moonlight," and the boy saves the girl from an attempted abduction by an Indian raiding party. The happy ending so earnestly desired by the young couple seems imminent.

It is not until the final scene of the second act, however, that they finally attain meaningful love and a happy ending.

The songs and dances accompanying the play vary in tone from tender to defiant to rollickingly funny. The choreography for the dance numbers has been arranged by Nancy Spanier '64, and the five - piece band, consisting of two pianos, a harp, a bass violin, and percussion, will be directed by Donald Simon '66.

The cast includes Catherine Scimeca '65 as Luisa, Thomas Bullard '66 as Matt, Ronald Salomon '66 as El Gallo, Ted Baer '67 as Huck, Arnold Gelber '65 as Bell, Ted Pendleton '63 as Henry, Bruce Johnson '67 as Mortimer and Miss Spanier as the Mute.

Admission to the performances will be $2.00 general admission and $1.50 for college students.

Chapel Choir to Present Selections Of Classical Music in Concert Sat.

A concert of classical choral music will be presented especially for commencement weekend tomorrow afternoon. The chapel choir, under the direction of Mr. Robert Browne, is scheduled to begin its program at 2:15 in Mead Chapel.

Highlighting the performance will be a modern version of the Twenty - third Psalm for chorus and orchestra by Dwayne Davidson and the "Ockeghem," a musical work recently rediscovered from 400 - year - old manuscripts.

A selection of dramatic and liturgical music from the thirteenth century to the present will also be included in the program.

Excerpts from The Play of Daniel, a recently - revived thirteenth - century musical drama, will comprise the afternoon's first dramatic offering.

The Middlebury College madrigal group, under the conduction of Kelley, will also participate in the concert by singing two motets, "Tristis Est Anima Mea" by Kuhnau and "De Profundus" by Gluck.

Art On Display In Carr Gallery

An exhibition of student and faculty art work is now featured at Carr Hall. The annual display, which began June 1, will run through Monday.

Faculty works include paintings by Arthur K. D. Healy and Robert F. Reiff, fine arts professors, and by Louis M. Tavelli, fine arts lecturer. Student contributions include projects done in oil painting, water color and design classes.

Oates to Address Phi Beta Kappas

Dr. Whitney J. Oates, distinguished classicist and Avalon Professor of Humanities at Princeton University, will address the annual Phi Beta Kappa Dinner, 12:30 p. m. Sunday in Proctor Hall.

Professor Oates is one of Five Senior Fellows of the Center of Hellenic Studies, an inter-university world program devoted to the study of the classical Greek tradition.

Largely responsible for the establishment in 1953 of Princeton's Council of the Humanities, Professor Oates was also the driving force in the development on a nationwide scale of the National Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Program, brought into being at Princeton in 1945 and now administered by an independent foundation.

The guest speaker served as chairman of the Department of Classics for 15 years until 1961. He has been chairman of the interdepartmental committee that serves as administrative center for the Princeton Council of the Humanities.

CAMPUS Offers Something For All

Seniors

Seniors, as you prepare to leave the ivy-covered halls and shady cloisters of ol' Midd, do you feel a lump in your throat, a tear on your cheek? Do you find yourself saying, "I'm going to miss you, dear Middlebury, you and all the wonderful facets of your bustling campus"?

Well dry that eye, because you can maintain your ties with Middlebury, you can follow all of its fast paced action. How? Through THE CAMPUS! A nominal fee will purchase you a subscription that will be faithfully mailed to you each week.

Alumni

Why wait for the quarterly "News Letter" to learn what is happening in the distant Green Mountains of Vermont, when THE CAMPUS provides a concise and accurate summary of local events each week?

The college newspaper serves an audience far larger than the local community and keeps its readers posted on Middlebury's long - range development plans as well as student activities. You won't want to miss any important events as Middlebury's new administration enters its second year.

Parents

Parents, for that graduating senior who has everything, why not give him a part of college life that will stay with him at least a year? A subscription to THE CAMPUS would be an inexpensive and appreciated gift as each graduate could keep in close contact with friends and events back at school.

Graduation... and the Year After

Congratulate the graduate and his family.

Commencement day is a happy day for them. The parents are especially happy because they will have no more all-star bills to pay after they return the graduate's cap and gown to the rental agency.

They will have no more all-star bills, that is, until the Little Leaguer is ready for his majors and minors. The parents have been drawing heavily on their resources, and the family bank account is much, much less green than it was in the good old days.

Extend a long line of credit to them.

duation for the first time, has chosen to deliver the Baccalaureate Address. He will also announce the names of those seniors to be admitted to Phi Beta Kappa.

Their induction into the honorary society will be conducted by Dr. Paul Cubeta, president of the Middlebury chapter, at the Phi Beta Kappa luncheon following the service. Student, faculty and alumni members of the chapter, and parents, are invited to attend. Guest speaker will be Dr. Whitney Oates, avalon professor of humanities at Princeton University.

Monday morning's commencement exercises will begin at 10:15 with the traditional, august academic procession at the Memorial Field House. The Bachelor of Arts degree will be conferred upon the graduating class en masse by President Armstrong.

After the bestowal of the degree, the students will receive their diplomas individually, called to the platform by Thomas Reynolds, dean of the College, and congratulated with a handshake from the president.

This year marks Middlebury's first genuine co-ed graduation, with men and women accepting diplomas in mixed alphabetical order. Despite this innovation, the students receiving their diplomas individually remains a Middlebury tradition characteristic of a small college.

Following the commencement addresses, Dr. Cubeta, in his new capacity as College Orator, will introduce the recipients of the honorary degrees, read their citations and bestow the degrees.

Among the highlights to be remembered by this year's graduates and returning alumni are these new events and a new president in attendance.

Six to Receive Advanced Degree

Master of Arts Candidates:

Mrs. Alice D. Cobble, of Independence, Kansas; A. B. Smith, M. A. in French.

Joseph F. DiOrio, Jr., of York, Pa.; A. B. Dickinson College, M. A. in French.

David S. Greenberg, of Elnora, N. Y.; A. B. and M. A. at New York State College for Teachers, Albany, M. A. in French.

Henry Rottenbiller, Medicine Hat, Alberta, Canada; B. Ed. University of Alberta, M. A. in German.

Master of Science Candidates:

Charles C. Whitney, Jr., of Springfield, Vt.; A. B. Northeastern, M. S. in Chemistry.

Arthur M. Wood, of Warwick, R. I.; A. B. Middlebury, M. S. in Chemistry.

The three hundred seniors who leave the days of college behind next Monday will undertake a variety of new tasks next fall. Of the 240 students who responded to a questionnaire circulated by the deans office, 88 will continue their studies, 52 will accept employment and 30 will enter the armed forces as commissioned officers. Over 64 students have no plans for the fall, and the rest of the seniors did not answer the questionnaire.
